

Erika Cullen

Registered General Nurse and Midwife
Clinical Manager
Sidra Medicine

Erika Cullen is a clinical manager in the Department of Occupational Health at Sidra Medicine. Previously, she was a clinical manager in the Triage and Antenatal Departments, also at Sidra Medicine. Drawing on her 28 years of post-graduation experience as a nurse midwife, Erika recently supported the development of the COVID-19 response at Sidra Medicine. She holds a BSc (Hons) degree in midwifery and an MA in education. Her areas of interest/competence are competence-based assessment and knowledge decay in nurses and midwives. In 2016, Erika presented at the 35th Annual International Nursing & Midwifery Research & Education Conference of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland on the benefits and challenges of competence-based assessment for European-trained nurse managers working in the Middle East.
